

Juvenile Sentencing Guidelines Manual

Utah Sentencing Commission

INTRODUCTION

The Utah Sentencing Commission, pursuant to its statutory authority and responsibility, promulgates the following Juvenile Sentencing Guidelines. One of the primary duties of the Sentencing Commission is to develop guidelines and propose recommendations to all three branches of government concerning the sentencing and release of juvenile offenders. Utah Code Ann. § 63-25a-304. In order to assist the development of sound sentencing policy, the Commission recommends that all governmental agencies and private associations coordinate with the Commission regarding sentencing-related concerns.

The following manual is intended to instruct, serve as a resource, and to assist in the implementation of the 1997 Juvenile Sentencing Guidelines.

BACKGROUND

In 1994, the Juvenile Justice Subcommittee of the Utah Sentencing Commission initiated review of sentencing of juvenile offenders. This Subcommittee developed a uniform system of sentencing based upon earlier intervention and more intensive supervision for chronic offenders. This system, titled the Presumptive Standards for Juvenile Sentencing, was widely endorsed but failed to gain funding during the 1996 General Legislative Session.

In 1997, a legislative task force was created to study major issues in the juvenile justice system, including the sentencing of juvenile offenders. Through a wide spread cooperative process, the Presumptive Standards evolved into the current Juvenile Sentencing Guidelines in its matrix format. A unified voice including the Sentencing Commission, juvenile courts, the Division of Youth Corrections, and Governor's Office recommended these Juvenile Sentencing Guidelines to the legislative task force, which, in turn, adopted them. The 1997 legislature funded these new guidelines by means of passing SB 25 Sentencing Guidelines which is codified at Utah Code Ann. § 63-25a-304 and § 78-3a-514.

SB 25 Sentencing Guidelines states that "When preparing a dispositional report and recommendation in a delinquency action, the probation department or other agency designated by the court shall consider the juvenile sentencing guidelines developed in accordance with [the statute specifying the duties of the Sentencing Commission] and any aggravating or mitigating circumstances." The fiscal note of SB 25 was fully funded at $11.2 million. In addition, the guidelines successfully called for a new secure facility at a cost of approximately $9 million. The funding for the guidelines became effective July 1, 1997.

PHILOSOPHY STATEMENT

Although the foundation of the guidelines is sound, they need to be revisited, monitored, and evaluated on a regular basis. One of the primary directions of the Sentencing Commission is to provide this review, and the following basic philosophies and goals direct this effort. The goal of the guidelines is to bring more objectivity to the sentencing process but to also allow the juvenile court discretion in considering aggravating and mitigating circumstances. The guidelines provide for consideration of the following factors:

- severity of the presenting offense episode;
- Utah penal statutes;
- delinquency history and risk to society;
- judicial discretion; and
- continuum of sanctions.

Sanctions should be proportionate to the severity of the presenting episode severity. The guidelines should reflect the culpability of the juvenile offender based on the nature of the presenting criminal episode. A single criminal episode is defined as “all conduct which is closely related in time and is incident to an attempt or an accomplishment of a single criminal objective.” Utah Code Ann. §76-1-401. In addition, the guidelines should consider the juvenile offender’s role coupled with the relevant criminal episode history. The guidelines are comprised of a scoring system which allows evaluation beyond the presenting episode. Distinctions between person, property, and public order offenses, broader categories paralleling the degrees within the criminal code, and the criminal episode history comprise the foundation of the matrix. The matrix portion of the guidelines includes a variety of dispositions to accommodate a continuum of sanctions which are probation, state supervision, community placement, and secure care.

Juvenile sentencing, among other things, should focus on the particular circumstances of each criminal episode, offender, and victims involved. Guidelines should promote uniformity while, at the same time, afford the juvenile court the flexibility to fashion a specific sentence to an individual juvenile offender. Therefore, aggravating and mitigating circumstances must be factored into the framework of the guidelines. Decision makers are strongly encouraged to abide by the guidelines. Departures from the guidelines may be based upon substantial aggravating or mitigating factors which are strongly encouraged to be articulated on the record. These guidelines are not intended to eliminate but simply structure discretion.

GUIDELINES PREMISE

The primary goal of the guidelines is to better protect society. This is accomplished through two basic approaches: 1) earlier intervention and 2) more intensive supervision. There exists broad agreement that earlier intervention may prevent or disrupt the delinquent careers of most juveniles. The guidelines are intended to revolutionize the way in which juveniles are sentenced. The added resources that accompany the guidelines allow for meaningful intervention to occur much earlier. Across the entire selection of dispositions, from probation to secure care, the guidelines recommend earlier intervention. Consequently, these guidelines will most likely have a net widening effect, i.e., more offenders will be brought into the juvenile justice system earlier. The early intervention approach is also intended to have a long term impact. It is an effort to rehabilitate these younger offenders before they become imbedded in a delinquent lifestyle and before they penetrate the system to the point of long term out-of-home placement.

At the same time, the guidelines provide for more intensive supervision of juvenile offenders. This is particularly true for the chronic juvenile offenders. Although the Serious Youth Offender law, Utah Code Ann. § 78-3a-602, is intended to transfer many of these chronic and serious juvenile offenders into the adult system, there is still a growing need for secure placements in the juvenile system. The guidelines provide for more and earlier incapacitation of chronic and serious juvenile offenders. In short, the guidelines implement a system that will hopefully change juvenile behavior, but one that can lock-up juveniles that refuse to change.

Sentencing guidelines should communicate a general standard to all of those involved in the system: prosecutors, defense attorneys, juvenile offenders, probation officers, case managers, judges, and victims alike. All of these parties should have a general idea of a disposition in a particular case. This fosters equity in the system by promoting the practice of sentencing similarly situated offenders similarly. However, there should be no concrete expectation that a recommended sentence will be the one actually imposed. Guidelines should also assist in managing current and future resources by serving as a predictive instrument. Guidelines should even further treatment and cognitive restructuring efforts by mapping out the probable dispositions of future criminal activity. This entire approach brings more accountability to the system.

At the same time, sentencing guidelines need to preserve judicial discretion and individualized sentencing. Although all participants involved in the system are encouraged to refer to the guidelines, only the recommending authority, such as juvenile court probation, is mandated by statute to consider them. Utah Code Ann. § 78-3a-514(2). As to the actual sentencing, the guidelines are entirely discretionary and do not bind the juvenile court. The guidelines include a non-exhaustive list of aggravating and mitigating factors for consideration when deviation is appropriate.

MATRIX FORMAT

The new matrix format within the guidelines provides several benefits. It balances the presenting episode with the criminal episode history. In turn, this provides for a balanced consideration of the juvenile offender's current conduct with his or her record. Such an approach demonstrates trends in a juvenile offender's delinquent career. This matrix format also facilitates ongoing change in public policy and may be shaped over time to more accurately reflect judicial practice and availability of resources.

GUIDELINES AS A TOOL

Utah law provides the basis for the sentencing of juvenile offenders. By sound design these statutes allow significant latitude in decision making. The guidelines are an attempt to further structure decision making relative to sentencing, yet still retain the flexibility to deal with atypical cases. The guidelines also provide a means of determining and allocating required resources. Utah's guidelines are intended to maintain the desirable functions of judicial discretion, and at the same time incorporate a rational criminal justice philosophy, eliminate unwarranted disparity, and provide a tool to match resources with needs.

The guidelines, as structured, provide a forum for discussion regarding sentencing and a common frame of reference on which to base discussion. Equally important, they provide a means to look into the future and assess the demand for resources based on policy changes. An information system will exist that tells how many offenders fall into each guidelines category and allows projections to be made as to the impact of proposed changes. The Utah Sentencing Commission is the appropriate body to coordinate and analyze this information.

POLICY IMPLICIT IN THE GUIDELINES

These guidelines are a cooperative venture. No additional legislation is being proposed to coerce agencies to conform. The effort is to provide a mechanism for communication and improvement of key policy rather than to dictate practice by statute or rule. For the guidelines to function well, several policies are important. The policies need not be implemented exactly as stated, but their intent is critical.

Prosecution

Prosecutors may use the guidelines to determine the implications of charging and plea negotiations. The guidelines are intended to make the system predictable by making explicit the sentence an offender with a given background is likely to receive. This makes charging and plea negotiations even more critical. Prosecutors should make it a policy to explain the effect of charging and plea negotiations in each individual case to the victim.

Recommending Authority

The authority that recommends the sentence to the juvenile court, ordinarily juvenile court probation, must consider the sentencing guidelines. The recommending authority should include the guidelines sentence in their pre-sentence report along with their own recommendation which may entail deviation from the guidelines. All this information should be passed on to the sentencing judge, the prosecutor, and the offender. The recommendations made to the judge should conform to the guidelines unless substantial aggravating or mitigating circumstances are documented in the recommendations. Reports should be kept of the recommendations where deviation from the guidelines was recommended.

Sentencing Judges

Sentencing judges may require that the guidelines forms be attached to all recommendations. Judges are encouraged to consider the sentencing guidelines when rendering dispositions in delinquency matters. When the disposition is different than what the matrix calls for due to substantial mitigating or aggravating circumstances, these circumstances should be stated in open court and be included on the record.

Juvenile Sentencing Guidelines Instructions & Definitions

The guidelines are comprised of three fundamental parts: 1) the criminal episode history assessment, 2) the matrix with its continuum of dispositions, and 3) a list of aggravating and mitigating factors. Observation and assessment is also to be considered in the guidelines as explained below.

All offenses used in the guidelines are convictions grouped into episodes. A single criminal episode is defined as “all conduct which is closely related in time and is incident to an attempt or an accomplishment of a single criminal objective.” Utah Code Ann. §76-1-401. By way of application to the guidelines, a criminal episode is represented by the most severe offense that occurred on the actual day. Non-judicial closures or non-petitioned episodes as well as cases dismissed or found not true by the court are not counted toward the guidelines.

CRIMINAL HISTORY ASSESSMENT

The Criminal History Assessment is located at the top of Form 1. It is divided into five levels of severity, rows I - V. This assessment determines the vertical axis (rows) located on the matrix. Ordinarily, when evaluating the criminal episode history, the recommending officer should not include the most severe presenting episode because the presenting episode is counted separately on the horizontal axis of the matrix. To count the presenting episode in the history would be double counting which is not intended by the guidelines. The only instance when a presenting criminal episode is to be counted in the history is a felony offense where the offender had previously been in youth correction's community placement. As stated in Level V, described in detail below, any felony after community placement, including the presenting offense, should be counted in the history.

If multiple episodes are being adjudicated at the same hearing, they should be adjudicated in order from least severe to most severe. All except the last episode should be added to the offender's offense history. The last episode should be treated as the presenting episode offense.

Probation violations, contempt, and non-judicial actions are to be considered as aggravating factors within the guidelines but are not to be considered as part of the criminal history assessment.

The five levels of criminal episode history severity are as follows:

Level I	0 to 3 Misdemeanor Episodes or 0 Felony Episodes
Level II	4 to 5 Misdemeanor Episodes or 1 Felony Episode
Level III	6 to 7 Misdemeanor Episodes or 2 to 3 Felony Episodes
Level IV	8 or More Misdemeanor Episodes or 4 Felony Episodes or 1 Person Felony Episode or 1 Firearm Felony Episode
Level V	5 or More Felony Episodes or 2 or More Person Felony Episodes or 2 or More Firearm Felony Episodes or Any Felony After Community Placement (Including Presenting Offense)

DISPOSITION ASSESSMENT

The disposition assessment is the matrix located on the bottom of Form 1. It is comprised of 50 cells within varying shaded areas of dispositions, e.g., probation or secure facility. The Criminal Episode History (vertical axis) is explained above.

Presenting Episode Severity

The Presenting Episode Severity determines the various columns on the horizontal axis of the matrix. All but the most serious presenting criminal episode should be included as part of the criminal episode history. The ten available columns are broken down by offenses. (A listing of offenses by these ten column categories is available in the addendum along with a sample guidelines notice which will act as an alert on the juvenile information system.) Probation violations and contempt are to be considered as aggravating factors but not to be considered as part of the presenting episode severity analysis.

POSSIBLE DISPOSITIONS

After determining the Level of Criminal Episode History and the Presenting Criminal Episode Severity, the recommending officer should consult the matrix to determine the recommended sentence for a particular offender. The cell where these presenting episode severity and the criminal episode history intersect determines the recommended disposition.

The following describes the available graduated sanctions under the guidelines in order of intensity.

Probation

Under the guidelines, the juvenile court is fundamentally changing probation to be more effective. In the future, each probation officer will carry smaller case loads, yielding more interactions between juvenile offenders and field probation agents. The probation population, in general, will have fewer offenses per offender than in the past and the offenses will be less serious. All of this is an attempt to turn the juvenile offender around before he or she graduates to more serious offenses. As such, probation is key to the earlier intervention premise of the guidelines. The probation agreement will incorporate the balanced approach of restorative justice which focuses on community protection, accountability, and competency development.

To realize the benefits of this new probation, the following statewide model is provided: probation case loads should not exceed 15 probationers per officer and should last approximately three months; in cases of probation violations, the ratio should not exceed 10 probationers per officer and should last for six months. Again, the probation component of the new guidelines is essential to their success. It is therefore strongly recommended that the various juvenile court districts follow this model.

State Supervision

The state supervision category is a new sentencing option on the guidelines. It fits between probation and community placement on the continuum of available dispositions. The overriding philosophy of this option will also be consistent with the three areas of the balanced approach of restorative justice which are community protection, accountability, and competency development. State supervision is designed to deliver an intensified level of intervention for juveniles who have reached a delinquency level defined by the guidelines and are not yet ready for long term removal from their homes. Those sentenced under the guidelines may qualify for this option.

State supervision resources should be focused on juveniles who have not penetrated the juvenile justice system beyond probation. Juveniles who have been placed out of their home may qualify for state supervision based on their delinquent record, but should be served through out-of-home placement resources. Those not yet reaching this out-of-home sanction level should also be served through current resources. State supervision was created to provide more intervention while a juvenile is in their own home and to reduce the number of juveniles being placed in the long term custody of the state. The responsibility for state supervision is divided between the juvenile court, the Division of Youth Corrections, and to a much smaller extent, the Division of Child and Family Services.

The primary interventions of state supervision will be provided in the juvenile's own home. A smaller portion of this option's population will be placed in an out-of-home placement of limited duration, generally less than 90 days. The majority of the juveniles receiving state supervision will be served by the juvenile court and should first be on probation. Prior to out-of-home state supervision placement, a juvenile should generally receive in-home state supervision through probation. It is anticipated that the juvenile court is the case management agency, whether the placements are in-home or out-of-home. The assigned officer will be the identified worker to coordinate the interventions of state supervision.

Each juvenile receiving this sanction will have a written "correction plan" outlining specific measurable outcomes in each of the three areas of the balanced approach. This plan will be under the direction of the juvenile court while the juvenile is in their own home and modified as appropriate for an out-of-home placement. The modifications will be made in consultation with the agency providing the out-of-home placement. The optimum goal is to coordinate both in-home and out-of-home placements in order to maximize the effects of each.

It is important to note that any juvenile offender sent to the Division of Youth Corrections under a state supervision placement, must fall within the statutory age definition of a "youth offender." "'Youth offender' means a person 12 years of age or older and who has not reached 21 years of age." Utah Code Ann. § 62A-7-101(28) and 104.

If a juvenile is currently under community placement supervision or in secure care and commits an offense that would put him or her in state supervision, the placement should stay in the more intensive option. State supervision includes the various wrap-around services and programs. These include day/night reporting centers, electronic monitoring, work camps, and treatment programs.

Community Placement

Community placement involves a continuum of services which are both residential and nonresidential. The appropriate specific placement within this option depends upon the juvenile offender's particular needs balanced with the necessary level of supervision to protect the public. Although it also involves a continuum of services, community placement is distinct from state supervision. Private providers play a large role in community placement and various alternatives include proctor homes, wilderness programs, sex offender treatment group homes, and substance abuse treatment. There were no additional community placement slots provided under the guidelines funding.

Secure Facility

Secure facility placement is the most intrusive sentencing option under the guidelines and should be reserved for the most dangerous or chronic offenders that remain in the juvenile justice system. The guidelines are designed to facilitate this design. These placements are generally long-term and involve behavioral and cognitive restructuring and an emphasis on victim reparation through restitution programming. The funding for the guidelines provides for 72 additional secure beds.

The Youth Parole Authority, which decides the length of placement in secure facilities, has adopted release guidelines for the length of secure confinement. Similar to the new Juvenile Sentencing Guidelines, the release guidelines incorporate a matrix format and aggravating and mitigating factors. The release guidelines have increased the length of stay by approximately 50% across the entire crime severity axis.

Other Sanction

The section shaded “other sanction” includes fines, restitution, and community service and is not necessarily a part of the guidelines. However, these sentences may be imposed in combination to other guidelines dispositions.

OBSERVATION AND ASSESSMENT

Observation and assessment is intended as a diagnostic tool. The guidelines are intended to reemphasize the appropriate role of observation and assessment in assisting the juvenile court in finding the appropriate disposition. The 40 additional observation and assessment beds funded under the guidelines will provide for more assessment capability which can be utilized anywhere within the system. Observation and assessment is not intended to be used as a disposition in and of itself nor simply for shock incarceration or time-out for juvenile offenders.

SHORT TERM DETENTION

Juveniles may be committed to a place of detention or an alternative to detention for a period not to exceed 30 days subject to the court retaining continuing jurisdiction. This option, although not identified within the context of the guidelines, may be used as a disposition by the juvenile court for any delinquent act, regardless of the criminal history.

AGGRAVATING & MITIGATING FACTORS

As mentioned, it is critical that the guidelines preserve judicial discretion and individualized sentencing. There are occasionally circumstances that compel deviation from the guidelines. Some of the more common reasons are listed for convenience on Form 2. Other reasons, as they occur, can be specified. Reasons should always be specified when the guidelines disposition is not recommended. These listed factors are suggestions only, by no means do they constitute all of the justifications for departures, upward or downward. Often, there will be a combination of factors involved in a particular case that justify a departure from the recommended disposition.

OTHER SENTENCING LEGISLATION

During 1997, the same year that the guidelines were funded and implemented, other sentencing powers were enacted that deserve explanation, at least as far as they impact the guidelines. SB 89 Juvenile Judges - Short Term commitment of Youth, codified at Utah Code Ann. § 78-3a-516, allows the juvenile court to sentence any minor convicted of a criminal offense to detention or detention alternatives for up to 30 days. As previously stated, this option is not a part of the guidelines.

SB 90 Juvenile Court Powers, also codified at § 78-3a-516, allows the juvenile court to sentence any minor convicted of contempt to any sanction except a secure facility. It should be noted that contempt is separate from the processes of the guidelines. Adjudicated probation violations and contempt of court should be considered outside of the matrix. However, prior convictions for contempt should be included in the Criminal Episode History.

OTHER

Juveniles transferred to the adult system either through certification or the Serious Youth Offender process should not be considered within the context of the guidelines, neither should juveniles convicted of aggravated murder or murder. Infractions and status offenses are not within the scope of the guidelines, neither are moving and non-moving violations unless they are drug related.

ACTION RESEARCH APPROACH

The guidelines are not intended to set policy in concrete. The philosophy, functioning, and problems of the juvenile justice system fluctuate constantly. The guidelines should be adaptable to change, and should even encourage such change. By monitoring the deviation from the guidelines, they can be modified to accommodate changes in policy or practice. Certainly the best policy tools provide feedback and are self-correcting. This entire approach is one of the ongoing goals of the Sentencing Commission.

The guidelines are intended to be revisited regularly. Initially, these guidelines are intended to be prescriptive, they are meant to change the way juvenile offenders are being sentenced. However, over time, the guidelines are intended to be descriptive and meant to simply describe how sentencing occurs. The Sentencing Commission, along with the cooperation of the juvenile court and the Division of Youth Corrections, will closely track guidelines use in order to regularly revise and update the guidelines.

The legislature expects the Sentencing Commission to provide a regular accounting of the resources which accompany the guidelines. Also, it is important that the guidelines, over time, reflect the actual sentencing practice of the juvenile court. As mentioned, once the guidelines become descriptive, they will need to be constantly tracked and revised. This ongoing research approach will help assure that the guidelines are implemented uniformly and realize their beneficial intent.

FORM 2

Juvenile Sentencing Guidelines Aggravating and Mitigating Factors

Aggravating Factors:

- 1. Extreme Cruelty: Those facts surrounding the commission of a violent felony demonstrate such callousness and cruelty towards the victim as to shock the conscience of the Court.
- 2. Prior Violent Delinquent Conduct: Defendant has demonstrated, by his prior history of delinquency adjudications, a propensity for violent, delinquent conduct.
- 3. Repetitive Delinquent Conduct: Repetitive Delinquent Conduct is adjudication for the same or similar offense on two or more previous, separate occasions or a gross number of prior offenses.
- 4. Need for Secured Treatment: The Juvenile Offender is in need of rehabilitative correctional treatment which can be most effectively provided if he is placed in secured confinement.
- 5. Undue Depreciation of Offense: It would unduly depreciate the seriousness of the offense to place the juvenile in unsecured confinement.
- 6. Victim Suffered Substantial Injury or Monetary Loss: (1) The offense involved attempted or actual money loss substantially greater than typical for the offense; (2) The offense caused substantial physical or psychological injury to the victim.
- 7. Prior Abuse of Victim: On prior occasions, the offender has harassed, threatened, or physically abused the victim of the current offense.
- 8. Custody Status at The Time of Offense: The offender was in the custody of the Division of Youth Corrections at the time the offense was committed.
- 9. Lack of Remorse/ Undue Appreciation of Offense by Respondent: The juvenile has demonstrated a total lack of remorse, an undue appreciation of the charge, or a lack of acceptance of responsibility with regard to the offense.
- 10. Supervision to Monitor Restitution: A long period of supervision is necessary to monitor the offender's restitution responsibilities.
- 11. Lack of Amenability (Lack of Cooperation) with Lesser Sanctions: The offender has demonstrated a lack of cooperation with lesser restrictive sanctions through violation of a prior or current period of probation.
- 12. Vulnerability of victim: The offender knew, or should have known, that the victim of the offense was particularly vulnerable or incapable of resistance due to extreme youth, advanced age, disability, or ill health.
- 13. Juvenile Used Weapon: The juvenile used a weapon during the commission of the offense.
- 14. Prior Delinquent Adjudications In Other States: The Juvenile has been adjudicated delinquent by courts in other states.
- 15. Lack of Attendance or Participation in Educational Programs: The Juvenile has failed to attend or participate in school or other appropriate educational or vocational programs, at the time of the delinquent acts and said failure was without medical or other proper excuse.
- 16. Probation violations, contempt, etc. The Juvenile has probation violations, other contempt orders, or non-judicial actions that should be considered.
- 17. Previously Qualified for a More Severe Sanction The Juvenile has previously qualified for a particular disposition, then re-offended with a recommendation of lesser severity than the original disposition.

Other _____

Mitigating Factors:

- 1. Victim Participation: To a significant degree, the victim was an initiator, willing participant, aggressor, or instigator of the incident.
- 2. Voluntary Redress or Treatment: Before adjudication the offender compensated or made a good faith effort to compensate, the victim of the delinquent conduct for any damage or injury sustained, or, before adjudication, the offender voluntarily sought professional help for drug/alcohol treatment, or any other recognized compulsive behavioral disorders related to the offense.
- 3. Under Duress: The juvenile committed the offense under duress, coercion, emotional distress, threat or compulsion insufficient to constitute a complete defense but which significantly affected his or her conduct.
- 4. Inducement by Others: The offender, with no apparent predisposition to do so, was induced by others to participate in the delinquent act.
- 5. Physical/Mental Impairment: The offender, because of physical or mental impairment, lacked substantial capacity for judgement when the offense was committed. The voluntary use of intoxicants (alcohol or other drugs) does not fall within the purview of this circumstance.
- 6. Concern for victim by Non-Principal: The offense was principally accomplished by another person and the offender manifested extreme caution or sincere concern for the safety or well being of the victim.
- 7. No Prior Adjudications: The juvenile has no prior adjudications.
- 8. Treatment Needs Exceeds Need for Punishment: The offender is in greater need of an available treatment program than of punishment through incarceration.
- 9. Assistance to the Prosecution: Offender rendered substantial assistance to Authorities in the investigation and or prosecution of this or other offenses or crimes.
- 10. Mental Retardation:
 - (a) The Offender is "significantly sub-average in general intellectual function (usually interpreted as an IQ score of 70 or less); and
 - (b) "bias deficits in adaptive behavior" (has insufficient life skills to get along without constant assistance from others); and
 - (c) "manifested the above handicaps during the developmental period", (applies to all juveniles)
- 12. Other _____
